SYNOPSIS!

SB-FILMS

DEFECTIVE MAN! is the story of two office workers that are involved in a horrible chemical accident in the supply closet. As the result of this accident, they are transformed into our two main “heroes,” Defective Man and Horn Dog. Unfortunately for our heroes, the chemicals didn’t actually give them any powers.

After putting up with Defective Man and Horn Dog’s new “traits” for a few years, there comes a breaking point at work. The company can’t just fire them, as they were injured at work and are now covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act, but the company can no longer tolerate Defective Man and Horn Dog’s antics, so a compromise is reached. Defective Man and Horn Dog are offered a deal in which they will continue to be paid their salary and benefits for the rest of their lives, as long as the promise to never, ever, come to work again.

Defective Man and Horn Dog take their severance package and their newly acquired free time and decide to set up their own freelance, low-impact law enforcement business. They procure some free space in a local warehouse to use as their “secret” lair, and also recruit two more not-so-super-heroes to join their cause, Captain Orange-Piss (bet you can guess his special power) and the man from the Rio Grande, Bill Gill. The Defective Four equip their almost-secret lair with the latest in technology (a Super-VHS VCR, a Tandy TRS-80 computer and dot-matrix printer, and a white board), and begin advertising their services to the public.

The Defective Four’s crime fighting abilities will be tested by Defective Man’s nemesis (and ex-girlfriend), the dastardly Hevvy Flo and her right-hand-man / lover, Ronny Tobins, as they implement a nefarious scheme to slowly flood Albuquerque over a matter of days via an overly-complicated scheme involving the city water supply and hallucinogenic drugs. In addition to the threat posed by Hevvy Flo, the Defective Four will be tested by video store violence, hoodlums intent on hurting the homeless, bad b-boys hell-bent on besting our heroes in a break-dancing boogie down, keeping the semi-secret lair a secret (especially from the other people working in the warehouse), and of course, paying the bills.

THE MAKING OF DEFECTIVE MAN!

Ryan became involved with DEFECTIVE MAN! way back in 2006 when Steve contacted him about a script Steve had written. Steve had seen a short Ryan directed while portraying The Toxic Avenger at the Troma Dance New Mexico film festival, and thought he would be a good choice to direct the script Steve had written about two wanna-be superheroes, Defective Man and Sexual Man. Steve sent the script to Ryan, who read it and agreed to be involved, as long as Ryan could re-write the script.

The original script for DEFECTIVE MAN! contained many elements that could not be done on the budget level that SB-Films worked at, and also needed polishing, especially on the dialogue. Ryan filled his time between technical support calls at TiVo busting out a quick 2nd draft of the script. Steve had changes he wanted to that 2nd draft, so Ryan and Steve collaborated on a 3rd draft, which became the “shooting script,” though much of what was written changed by the time it was shot.

Ryan changed jobs, moving on to manage a Hollywood Video in the “war zone” of Albuquerque (known as “The Murder Store”, as it was the site of the 2nd worst mass-murder in Albuquerque’s history), and pre-production continued. Ryan and Steve attempted to secure financing, and eventually Steve decided to produce the film himself. Ryan purchased a camera, lights, and a mic, and Steve started working on costumes and locations for the film. As is often the case with micro-budgeted cinema, Steve and Ryan did most every job there was to do on set.

Auditions took place in January 2007 at The Guild Cinema in Albuquerque’s Nob Hill district, and Steve and Ryan found a pool of local talent willing and able to work for free to make a movie. Well, Ryan and Steve thought they had found talent willing to work for free, until people started dropping out! Paul is Defective Man #2, Steve is Captain Orange-Piss #3, Josh is Bill Gill #3, and Arturo is Horn Dog #4! Luckily, Haylee was our only Flo, and Trent was the only Ronny, as the role was written specifically for him!

SB-FILMS

DEFECTIVE MAN! was originally scheduled for a two-week shoot in the summer of 2007, but the aforementioned actor issues, along with Ryan now changing jobs to work at a bank, nixed the two-week plan. Instead, shooting began on evenings and weekends, starting with the “Park Bench” scenes. Then, all of Trent’s footage was shot in the course of a weekend, as he was in town for the premier of Scott Phillips’ Gimme Skelter. Shooting became much more sporadic after that, as we had to line up people and places and somehow get everyone’s schedules to work together. This continued until November 2007, when we shut down for the winter. In spring 2008 shooting continued, more sporadically, until that winter when we shut down once again. Spring 2009 saw the very few remaining scenes shot, and by April 2009 principal photography wrapped.

The shooting script has changed many, many times due to unforeseen circumstances (losing locations, actors not showing up, props/costumes not available, etc.), and in it’s final form, DEFECTIVE MAN! the movie was quite different than DEFECTIVE MAN! the shooting script. All of the film was shot in Albuquerque and Rio Rancho, New Mexico, at locations graciously provided to SB-Films. These locations included Park’s Landscaping as the Office, Garcia’s Tents as the Secret Lair, Autumnwood Furniture as the Smegma Flats Water Treatment Facility, The Lotus Club as Skeezy Sundstrom’s Skin Shack, Burning Paradise as Burning Paradise, and The Guild Cinema as The Guild Cinema. Other random locations – such as Steve and Ryan’s houses, Steve’s back yard, various alleys around Albuquerque, etc. – filled in the gaps for the rest of the filming.

Various artists have provided music, and more music is being solicited for the film. So far, musicians providing music include The Mike Project, Styxxoplax, RiverRat Jenkins, Rebilt, Illustrated Man, Mark “M.E.” Edwards, WURM, Gunrunner, Gonzorealism, SCG, and Aaron Michael Martinez.

Scenes premiered at Troma Dance New Mexico 2007 and 2008, as well as Bubonicon 2008. DEFECTIVE MAN!: THE YOU CAN’T ILLEGALLY DOWNLOAD IT ON TORRENT SITES YET CUT premiered at the Troma Dance New Mexico 2009 festival, and more footage is available online, on YouTube and Facebook. Editing continues, as well as work on the sound, color correction, etc., and also on the animation for the Lost in the Andes scene, and the Courtroom scene (including a cameo by director Lloyd Kaufman).
